Not illustrated. 1799 Excerpt: .or portions, of unequal length, some containing only B three or four short verses, and others as many as three hundred. Such is the reverence in which it is held by Mohammedans, that they never touch it without performing certain ablutions; they will write verses from it on their banners, and on the walls of their mosques; and they place copies of it in boxes of gold or silver, which they carry with them as amulets or charms. The khalifs had it adorned with precious stones; and the Othman emperors still follow their example. Parts of it were printed from time to time by the great Arabic scholars of Europe, such as Erpenius, and Golius; and the whole has been frequently printed. We have now lying before us a beautifully printed copy from the press of Tauchnitz, the eminent printer at Leipsic, edited by Dr. Fluegel, in 1834. It has been translated from the Arabic into the Persian, Turkish, Javan, and Malay languages, for the use of Mohammedans; and, for the gratification of Christian scholars, into Latin, and all the modern languages of Europe. The importance of this book will be seen when it is recollected that it is not only a book of religious doctrines, but the ground-work of all the civil and criminal laws in Mohammedan countries. Besides the Koran, the Mohammedans have a body of traditions purporting to be the sayings of the prophet, which they call sonna, or custom. The adherents to...
