General condition steadily improved, but there was more or less constant pain in the right lower quadrant. After observation for over three weeks, operation was thought advisable. Operation.--Bladder adherent to right tube over about one half its surface; recent adhesions between uterus and tubes, both of which were displaced backwards and behind the retroverted uterus; fimbriated end of right tube obliterated, tube distended; right ovary, the size of a hen s egg. Right salpingo-oophorectomy; ovary, ruptured in removal, contained bloody serum, and hanging from the cavity was a bit of tissue suggesting ovarian pregnancy; the right tube contained clotted blood. Left tube looked normal for more than one-half its length; but fimbriated end was occluded: this end was resected, the end split, and attached to the left ovary, which appeared healthy. Ventrosuspension of uterus. Time of operation, 1 hour 25 minutes. Convalescence uninterrupted: out of bed on the 22d day; discharged well on the 27th day. Short linear abdominal scar, right broad ligament empty, appendages on left palpable but not tender, uterus in apposition with anterior abdominal wall, some exudate remaining in post-uterine fossa, which, however, was not tender. 15.
