Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In the shadow of the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Shenandoah Valley is the setting for Little Sisters of War, a story of women athletes and the game of lacrosse. Things begin with Kate Holland preparing to return to her alma mater, tiny Spotswood College. Her journey takes us back to the years when she was young, and her character formed, especially during one particular year, a season of controversy, conflict, and triumph. Kate had eight minutes to get over to the dining hall. She grabbed her hat and bolted. A brass bar, securing the weathered oak doors of Wilson Hall, rattled and snapped as it opened. A stray gust of ice-cold air stopped Kate in her tracks. She stood motionless, elevated above the campus mall. Crunching metal noises of a door slamming behind her jarred her into action. She stood alone in the rising half-light. She inhaled deeply, permitting cool, crisp air to stir her senses. A wood stove in the distance—a hint of dampness—food-ubiquitous scents of mountains—the remnants of winter intermingled. She shivered. Bad weather still lurked, dormant and hidden, waiting to be aroused for a final glory ride up Shenandoah's valley from the southwest. There is always one last storm to announce the arrival of spring. The breeze moving gently from the north brought a distinctive musk of cow manure. In her four-year stay at Spotswood College, she'd learned to judge wind direction by odor. The wind from the west carried the smell of turkey crap—cow smell came on a north wind. Her senses quickly dulled. I love this foul-smelling place. The ball came loose. Taylor and Dee collided—a face plant, they hit the...
