Excerpt from An Oration Delivered Mr. President - Ladies and Gentlemen: We hail the Fourth of July! We hail it as a day made gloriously immortal, by one of the most sublime achievements that was ever conceived in patriotism or executed in human wisdom, since the foundations of the earth began. Thus consecrated, we hail its return in the calendar of time, as our great national Sabbath, when we can all, with one accord, seek rest from our secular labors and honor the day with appropriate observances: when men of every political faith, mutually laying aside their partizan difference, as unbecoming the day, meet together in one common brotherhood, to recount, with filial affection, the deeds which our fathers have done; to con, anew, the lessens of virtue and polity which their wisdom has taught us; and to renew, at the altar of our Country, our vows of eternal devotion to her best interest - her integrity, one and indivisible. In this spirit, we may take a retrospect of our history, taking example from its brightness, admonition...
