Therefore, I invested quality time almost everyday writing these emails so that they could serve as guideposts for my oldest son, and so that they could also direct all my other children. All but the youngest three read along with my son. At the prompting of some friends, I made these emails public shortly after I started writing him and live on my blog. The feedback I received prompted me to follow up with this book. I sincerely hope that these reflections transfer something of value to you and your family.
